UK-Ukraine agreement halts Russian imperial ambitions

The agreement between the UK and Ukraine is symbolic, but at the same time disastrous for Moscow.

Russia sees the 100-year partnership agreement between Ukraine and the UK as a fatal diagnosis for its imperial rule over Ukraine. It jeopardises Russia's attempts to expand its imperial wealth and diminishes its hopes of subjugating Ukraine, which has always been a jewel of Russian colonial rule.

In the eyes of the Kremlin, the British-Ukrainian agreement appears to be a clear decision by the West to put an end to Russian century-long imperialism.

Unlike the US and its episodic manifestations of isolationism, which have encouraged Russia to cultivate American leadership, Russia has sincerely and passionately despised the UK for centuries.

Russia is aware that the UK understands Russia's true nature, given its European location and centuries-long history of interacting with it.

The UK has a better picture of Russia than the rest of Europe

The Kremlin admits that it will not succeed in convincing the UK of its alleged and obviously fake peace initiatives and declarations regarding Ukraine and all the other global actions of Russia, which are always hostile to the Western world.

Ukraine is forming an alliance with a country that prominent Russian propagandists have urged Russia to bomb and wipe off from the face of the earth during recent years of war. Most Russians like this idea.

The United Kingdom does indeed seem to have a better perception of Russia compared to other countries. The UK therefore has a much better chance of joining the Eastern European countries, including the countries of the former USSR, which want to free themselves from Russia's imperial control.

The Russians had never succeeded in cultivating and subverting the UK leadership

Russians have infiltrated and cultivated almost all Western and European countries, including Germany, over the years and throughout history, as evidenced by the German economy's wilful reliance on Russian gas supplies alone.

At the same time, the Russians had never succeeded in cultivating and subverting the UK leadership.

Somehow, the UK has always displayed qualities that enabled it to expose Russia's true malicious intentions.

Western presence in Kyiv

By signing an agreement with Ukraine, the UK is showing Russia that it will not own Ukraine or install a puppet government in Kyiv.

It also suggests that a Western military alliance will soon be present in Ukraine to permanently end the war and allow the country to thrive in a peaceful and democratic environment free from Russian influence.

The article by former British Defence Secretary Ben Wallace suggested to the Kremlin that the UK has already made a decision regarding Russia

From the Kremlin's perspective, the UK may be the only Western country Russia has not deceived about its imperial and aggressive nature.

The Telegraph article by former British Defence Secretary Ben Wallace suggested to the Kremlin that the UK has already made a decision regarding Russia. The Kremlin believes that former UK top officials are announcing decisions and proposals that current officials cannot announce publicly due to protocol restrictions.

Russia takes the UK seriously

According to widespread belief in Russia, it was the UK that worked behind the scenes against the similarly imperial and despotic former Tsarist Russia, and it was the UK that directed Hitler against Soviet Russia.

There is also a theory in Russia that Winston Churchill tried to persuade the American leadership to bomb Moscow instead of Hiroshima, which President Harry Truman refrained from doing.

The UK has extensive knowledge about Moscow, sometimes even surpassing Moscow's own comprehension

When it comes to the UK, there are no illusions and no naivety in Moscow. The Kremlin is aware that the UK has extensive knowledge about Moscow, sometimes even surpassing Moscow's own comprehension.

The UK's presence in Ukraine demonstrates to Moscow that both London and Washington made the decision to abolish Russian imperialism.

Vladimir Putin is preparing to spend the rest of his rule in Russia in fierce resistance to the Anglo-Saxons in every corner of the planet.
